H019243 PEOPLE v. TRAN

The judgment is reversed. We remand the action with directions that the trial court take evidence on the reasons for the more than two-year delay in charging defendant with the residential burglary. The court should then balance the harm to defendant against the justification for the delay. If the court decides defendant's due process rights have been abridged, the case should be dismissed. Alternatively, if the court finds the delay justified, the judgment should be reinstated. (not published)
